Mapping and Politics in the Digital Age

Edited by Pol Barga  s-Pedreny, David Chandler and Elena Simon

Series: Routledge Global Cooperation Series

Maps have always played a crucial role in the history of politics, but as new technologies have developed, mapping now bears little resemblance to its cartographic origins. In a world increasingly conceived in terms of complexity and unknowability, mapping is seen as a real time and evolving process without fixed spatial relations. This book brings together insights from politics, media and anthropology to explore the growing importance of mapping for global politics, power, and cooperation. This book will be of interest to students and researchers within politics, geography, sociology, media, and digital culture and technologies.
