International Relations in the Anthropocene

New Agendas, New Agencies and New Approaches

- Offers an introduction to the concept and importance of the Anthropocene in International Relations
- Explores the key themes of International Relations and the Anthropocene including governance, security and resilience
- Includes contributions from all of the major names in the field

This textbook introduces advanced students of International Relations (and beyond) to the ways in which the advent of, and reflections on, the Anthropocene impact on the study of global politics and the disciplinary foundations of IR. The book contains 23 chapters, authored by senior academics as well as early career scholars, and is divided into four parts, detailing, respectively, why the Anthropocene is of importance to IR, challenges to traditional approaches to security, the question of governance and agency in the Anthropocene, and new methods and approaches, going beyond the human/nature divide. David Chandler is Professor of International Relations at the University of Westminster, UK. Franziska Müller is Assistant Professor for Globalization and Climate Governance at the University of Hamburg, Germany. Delf Rothe is Researcher and Principal Investigator of the DFG-funded research project 'The Knowledge Politics of Security in the Anthropocene', Institute for Peace Research and Security Policy, University of Hamburg, Germany.
